

EXPERIENCE SHARING: STUDYING IN GIES

by Esperanza, post graduate student of GIES

Hello, my name is Esperanza. I'm from Spain, but I've lived in Taiwan for 20 years (I grew up here). I'm a post graduate student of GIES. I'm about to start with my thesis, so that I can get the master degree within these two years. I'm also about to start as both a teaching assistant and a research assistant, which can enrich my experience and my resume.

At first, I wasn't planning on studying a master degree, but for several reasons, I ended up deciding to do it. This way, I can be able to keep staying in Taiwan and have it easier to find a job in the future.

WHY GIES?

Nowadays, a lot of people are studying international management, economics, MBA programs etc. That's the future, right, but there will be much more competitiveness as well, and you will have to be special to be hired. In GIES, you can have it all in one: economy, international affairs, politics, language, culture etc. It is not only about the European Union, but also about its relation with Taiwan and the world.

Apart from receiving class, you'll have a lot of different experiences, including visiting European institutions and companies in Taiwan. In other words, studying in the GIES can broaden your horizons.

Furthermore, you'll have a wide range of choices for your thesis topic, and the courses received in GIES will help you decide which direction to take.
